On selection, the user is redirected to the homepage.

Navigation bar: On click, the user is directed to the selected page.

Image carousel in background: Images change automatically at a pace of one image every 3 seconds. Images should depict restaurant dishes and drinks.

Vertical carousel buttons indicating more to the page. Their position is fixed, however, change to reflect the user's position on the page (i.e. the top half or the bottom half of the page). Clicking on the white button will make the page scroll to the bottom half and the colours of the buttons will change to the opposite colour (when at the bottom half, clicking on the white button will make the page scroll back to the top and the buttons will change colour accordingly).

Reserve a table

“Reserve a table” button: Button animates like a real button (press in when user clicks and depress when user releases). This applies to all buttons.

Clicking on a button in the navigation bar underlines the current selection (in this case, the user has selected the "Reserve a table" button, is redirected to the reservation page and the button becomes underlined to indicate this).

The top of the reservation box displays the current date (automatically set to today's date, however, changes to reflect user's selection from the calendar), number of diners (automatically set to 2 and changes according to user's selection), and time (automatically set to "No time selected" and changes to reflect the user's selection).

Openings hours, address, email address and phone number displayed clearly next to the reservation box.

Image depicting restaurant interior in the background.

Diner number field: automatically set to "2". On click, a dropdown menu appears below where the user may pick from numbers 1 to 6.

Calendar is automatically set to the current month. Arrows allow the user to scroll through months (11 months in the future). The user cannot go backwards past the current month or past 11 months in the future - the arrows become greyed out and unclickable when the user has reached a dead end. Beneath the month, shorthand is used to label the days (i.e. Mo, Tu, We, etc.).

Calendar dates displayed in boxes: Dates already past are greyed out and unclickable. Calendar is automatically set to today's date and indicated using a small corner triangle. Future dates that have no tables available for the set number of diners are also greyed out and made unclickable. Empty boxes with no dates are greyed out and made unclickable.

Diner number field dropdown menu: "2" is highlighted with a tick mark next to it to indicate the automatic selection. Clicking on another number closes the dropdown menu (animates back up) and the number in the diner number field changes to reflect the selection. If the user clicks on the field again, the dropdown menu will display the highlight and tick on the newly selected number.

Time field: automatically set to "Select a time" (no time has been selected yet). On click, a dropdown menu appears below displaying the times when a table is available for the set number of diners and the date.

A contrasting "Next" button: Clicking on this before the "Select a time" field is filled correctly produces an error message. The error message reads "Please select a time" underneath the time field.

Clicking on when all fields are filled correctly brings the user to the Contact Details screen state.

Time field: clicking on the field displays a dropdown menu below the field showing available dining times for the date and number of diners selected. The first option in the list is automatically highlighted (though not selected). Options are displayed in order earliest to latest dining times.

Selecting a time will close the dropdown menu (animates back up) and the field is replaced with the selected time. The "No time selected" at the top of the reservation box also changes to reflect this.

Clicking on the field again (after selecting a time) will reopen the dropdown menu with the selected time highlighted in the menu and a tick displaying next to it (as is done in the diner number dropdown menu).

When the user clicks on the "Next" button, the reservation box animates from right to left, to be replaced by a customer details form.

The top reservation details (date, number of diners and time) remain the same.

First Name and Last Name fields: On click, a blinking type cursor replaces the placeholder text (if the user clicks off without typing anything, the cursor disappears and the placeholder text reappears). Only characters are allowed. If the user enters invalid information, an error message appears below: Please enter valid details

Contact number field: the user's country code is determined using geo-location and is represented with the country's flag. On click, a blinking type cursor replaces the placeholder text (if the user clicks off without typing anything, the cursor disappears and the placeholder text reappears). Only numbers are allowed. If the user enters invalid information, an error message appears below: Please enter valid details

Email address field: User must input a valid email address. If they do not input a valid email address, an error message appears below: Please enter valid details

The "Next" button is replaced by a "Reserve a table" button and a less distinct "Previous" button appears to allow the user to return to the previous state.

The user can only proceed to the next state if all fields of the form have been completed correctly (the Comments field is not a required field as does not have to be filled). If a field has not been completed, an error message is displayed below the appropriate field.

Comments field: On click, a blinking type cursor appears. Users may type up to 2000 characters in the input field. A message below says how many characters they have typed and will change to reflect this number ("2000 of 2000 characters remaining").

Menu box with three tabs - Lunch menu, Dinner menu and Drinks menu tab.

The page automatically has the lunch menu tab open.

Clicking on a tab will enlarge the font on the tab and animate the line to slide across beneath the selected tab.

Main section of the menu box displays the selected menu (lunch, dinner or drinks). Selecting another tab makes the current menu animate to the side (to the left or to the right depending on its position in the carousel, e.g. if the user is currently on the dinner menu tab and clicks on the lunch menu tab, the dinner menu animates to the right and disappears, and the lunch menu animates in from the left).

Allergen information: a number corresponds to one of the 14 primary allergens that must be displayed (as required by the Food Safety Authority of Ireland). Dishes with any of these allergens display the corresponding number in their descriptions in the menu.
